CARR-207 Dr. Jacob J. Weaver, Sr. House
3406 Uniontown Road

3406 Uniontown Road provides an interesting interpretation of the rural Victorian-style architecture in Uniontown. Development of Victorian architecture occurred during a period when there was tremendous growth in popular magazines, many of which ran articles or regular columns on architecture or household improvements. Remodeling to bring one's old house up to fashionable standards of ornamentation was a frequent subject of these articles. At 3406 Uniontown Road, Dr. Jacob J. Weaver, Sr., who practiced medicine in Uniontown from 1848 to 1880, used some of the standard mid-nineteenth century remodeling techniques to create an up-to-date dwelling. In 1859, he purchased this property with a log house that appears to have been built by David Stem in 1812. The property had been owned by Jacob Appler from 1814 to 1846. The three central bays of the house are the original log structure. Weaver did primarily two things in his Victorian-style remodeling. He added a gable-front wing with period ornamentation on the east side, and he covered the entire surface with a board-and-batten exterior. The wing has excellent examples of ornamentation including bracket cornices over the windows, a circular window in the gable, and scalloped bargeboard. Be sure to look closely at the beveled battens which have a refined touch in the way they end with arched curves instead of running squarely straight to the eaves. The one-story wing on the west side was the doctor's office for Dr. Weaver and his son.
